

Notes on Contributors

John Leslie

John Leslie received his PhD in Political Science from UC Berkeley. He has been an academic staff member at Victoria University of Wellington (VUW) since 2005 and the VUW member of the New Zealand European Union Centres Network (EUCN) since 2006. Currently, he chairs VUW's Board of European Studies. His research interests focus on regional integration and changing labour market institutions.

Gloria Martinez

Gloria Martinez is a PhD Candidate at the School of Political and Social Sciences at the University of Melbourne. Her research focuses on military intervention, civil-military relations and international crisis management, as well as Western defence policies.

Milenko Petrovic

After growing up in the former Yugoslavia and beginning his academic career in his native city of Belgrade, Dr Petrovic has studied and researched as a visiting PhD student, postdoctoral fellow and/or visiting scholar at several Western European and US academic institutions, most notably the University of Kiel and University of Notre Dame. He has been lecturing and researching at the National Centre for Research on Europe at the University of Canterbury since 2001. He currently lectures on 20th century Eastern European history and politics, Europe's economic development and EU Enlargement issues beyond 2004. He has published widely on the comparative political economy and on development problems in the former Yugoslavia and Eastern Europe. In recent years he has been focusing his research interests on transitional problems in South-Eastern Europe as well as the prospects for further EU Enlargement to the East.

Philippine Colson

Philippine is a PhD in European Studies student at the Monash European and EU Centre. Her research focuses on the problems facing the new Member States of the EU, with a specific focus on Bulgaria. She has conducted research on corruption, civil society, and EU policy implications at the national level. Her current research is on social policies, concentrating on employment policies, the Lisbon Strategy, and its implications for new Member States. She worked and studied in Belgium, Bulgaria, and Canada before coming to Australia.

Evan Thompson

Evan graduated from Monash University with a Bachelor of Arts with a double major in International Politics and International Studies as well as a Diploma of Languages in Chinese. He subsequently successfully completed a Masters of International Relations at Monash University. Evan is currently enrolled in a Juris Doctor program and is awaiting acceptance into a PhD at Monash University.